MOST PERFECT, Natural, Durable, Distinct and Pleasant ever known.

They adapt themselves to their own supervision from their frames, Robbins, melted together, and derive their name "Diamonds" on account of their hardness and brilliancy.

The Scientific Principle on which they are constructed keeps the circle or centre of the lens directly in front of the eye, producing a clear and distinct vision in the natural healthy sight, and preventing that painful sensations, such as accompanying the use of ordinary Glasses, &c., peculiar to all other lenses.

They are mounted in the finest manner in frames of every quality, of all materials used for that purpose. Their durability and durability cannot be surpassed by any other frame.

Never genuine unless bearing the trade mark of each pair of frames.

ECLECTIC PHYSICIAN,

Formerly from 651 Broadway, New York, late of Portland, has arrived in Bangor, and taken rooms at the BANGOR HOUSE, where she will remain for a short time only.

CERTIFICATE OF CURES.

This is to certify that Mrs. Manchester has done for me, in my family, the last year, which market success, she has treated my wife, Lydia, for a long and severe case of Fever, from which she was unable to walk for nine months, and pronounced incurable by other physicians, and I have no hesitation in recommending her to the public as a skillful physician, and very worthy of their patronage.

JOHN HOBSON.

Portland, Maine.

This is to certify that Mrs. Manchester has cured me of my infirmity, which I have lived with for years, and which I believe to be incurable, and I have spent a great deal of money in the country and have been to the best physicians, and called on Mrs. Manchester, and she has cured me in a short time, and I have no hesitation in recommending her to the public as a skillful physician, and very worthy of their patronage.

S. T. KING,

Bridge-st. 1, May 2, 1870.

A Case of Spinal Disease Cured.

DEAR MADAME:—When you were in this place last autumn, I called upon you to examine my case, which was very difficult. I had not used my limbs to stand on them for three years. I had consulted eight or ten physicians, none of them done me any good. I will give you a full history of my case if you desire. I was in a very low state of health and strength of body. I advise all who are afflicted to go and consult Mrs. Manchester, and give her a fair trial, and you will be well paid.

Very truly yours,

JANE HALL,

Lewiston, Me.

ONE OF THE GREATEST CURES ON RECORD!

This is to certify that I have been sick for five years and have been to a number of physicians, and one would tell me one thing and another would tell me I had another disease, and then I would go to another, and he would tell me an entirely different story, but I got almost discouraged. I told the physicians that I felt as if something penetrating me to the inside, but they all laughed at the idea of anything of the kind and said I was nervous.—For the last two years I continually growing very large at times, and it seemed to me that my stomach was filled up, and when I retired at night, as if something rose in my throat, and I would almost suffocate. Hearing Mrs. Manchester's advertisement I was induced to go and consult her. She examined me and told me I had a live animal in my stomach. She said "I don't know what it is, but it is brown, and looks as much like a caterpillar as anything." She told me correctly about my feelings, that I took some of her medicines. She told me I would be very sick and so I was—I vomited for three days, and the third day I threw up something that resembled a horrible looking thing, about three inches long, about as large as my finger; and I think I owe my life to Mrs. Manchester. She told me when no other doctor would or could.—My health is rapidly improving. I say to every one go and see her, doubt how what this power that she says, but you will find you will be perfectly satisfied.

POLITICAL MORALITY.

The association of these two words may provoke a smile, and perhaps a sneer, from those who have accustomed themselves to regard politics only as a selfish scramble for political power and patronage; a mere dirty puddle of intrigue and corruption, in which no man can dabble and emerge with his moral character unsullied. Our conception, however, of the agency by which alone the regulation, protection and welfare of communities are established and promoted, is a much higher and we think a much truer one.

A "Government of the people, by the people, for the people," which has no morality in its politics, would offer but poor security for the guardianship of the great principles of truth and justice on which it professes to be founded, and we entirely dissent from the too prevalent idea that a taint of disrepute must necessarily attach to every person who endeavors to guide or influence that public opinion which is with us the law of the land. To this misconception of the actual mission of politics, may be ascribed a very large portion of the political ills which are so loudly complained of by those who are in fact justly responsible for their existence. If a distasteful measure is adopted or an unsatisfactory candidate nominated, an outcry is raised at once against the tyranny or incompetency of political parties, and those who scold the loudest and longest, are very generally forgetful that parties are what the people make them, and that the proper remedy for such evils is for every citizen to engage sufficiently in politics to ensure the expression of his wishes.

The formation of political parties is a necessity of popular government and can only be replaced by an irresponsible despotism. Experience shows that popular sentiment divides upon the most important questions, and thus ranges itself in two opposing organizations which become the champions and exponents of their respective principles. Under our system of majority rule those parties decide all questions of public policy. The candidates elected by them make the laws and the community are bound to submit to their authority. The whole system of caucus, convention and popular election is based upon the submission of all to the will of the majority, to dispute which is revolution.

The candidates elected by the people govern the land; the candidates are selected by the caucus, and the caucus is the expression of popular preference. If the system has defects, it is the people's system and they alone can improve it. We cannot imagine, however, that an obnoxious candidate could possibly be nominated in any caucus where a large majority of the voters should cast their votes against him. A member of a party may be directly instrumental in the selection of a candidate, either by voting directly for him or by surrendering his opposition by neglecting to vote at all. In either case he will be morally bound by a selection to which he tacitly consented by failing to oppose it in the manner provided by the rules of that majority to which he owes allegiance. The business of the government must go on, officers must be selected and the citizens must do their duty to themselves and the community by assisting to choose capable and trustworthy men; and they who neglect this duty and leave it for others to perform are under the same obligation to respect the decision, as to obey the laws enacted by legislators for whom they did not vote.

If there are moral responsibilities resting upon those who simply neglect the performance of their civic duties, there are others even more obvious, resting upon those who exercise their rights in a popular assemblage whose fundamental principle is submission to the decision of the greater numbers. A person who votes in a caucus or convention does so with the intention of securing for his favorite man or measure the united support of all, and his opponents are actuated by a like understanding. To dispute this principle after invoking it in one's own behalf is as contrary to every principle of good faith and morality as the repudiation of any voluntary agreement, only on a grander scale; as one would be breaking a pledge to an individual while the other is violating good faith with the community.

Of the demoralizing tendencies of ignoring the moral obligations of a majority rule, we have had striking illustrations, in our own party. After successful championship for years of measures to which all its members were sincerely attached, a wing of the party refused to submit to a principle which they would have invoked most strenuously against an opposing minority, and by "bolting" the majority nomination bestowed their efforts in such a manner as to jeopardize the success of the party to whose central ideas they still claimed allegiance, and to give indirect but powerful aid to men and principles to whom they were irreconcilably opposed. The party triumphed in spite of the defection, but the pernicious example was not forgotten; those who were angered at the bolt of last year and others who found now reasons for differing with the majority, have seized the weapon which others taught them to use and the result has been shown in the late election in an inextricable confusion of tickets and a disregard of political obligations which has prevented us from rolling up one of those grand majorities which have so often carried inspiration to our fellow Republicans throughout the land.

The loosening of party ties rapidly tends to a disregard of all political consistency, and men fling in their ballots as thoughtless of the importance of the act, as if they were the paper pellets of their school days. We imagine that no citizen would be sparing in his denunciation of a Congressman who should cast his vote for a principle or measure hostile to the wishes of his party and constituents, as a mere matter of complaisance to a personal friend. And yet we hear of persons—boring by their conventions to the support of the Republican ticket—who from personal dislike of their own candidate, friendly private relations with a political opponent, or a desire to further the aspirations of some favorite in their own party, have deliberately cast their ballots for men pledged against every article in the Republican creed.

We hear of a Democratic candidate thanking his Republican friends in Bangor for their complimentary vote. The Portland Argus "thanks" and "congratulates those liberal-minded and conservative men of the doughfant party, who acted with the Democracy upon the important questions before the people on Monday last." From different sections of the State we receive similar statements; and yet the parties whose political faith has rested so lightly upon them, would probably refuse any excuse from a public functionary who should allow himself to be influenced by similar motives.

While the people set such examples as these, they cannot reasonably expect politics to become elevated or politicians immaculate, and although in most cases such action has doubtless been thoughtlessly taken, the effect is directly against that improvement of our agencies for self-government which all should desire to accomplish.

When every citizen recognizes in their full import the obligations imposed upon him under our free institutions; performing his duty in himself and his neighbor by heeding his of all public duties and responsibility, acknowledging at all times the foundation principle that the will of the greatest number is entitled to the respect of the minorities, the true ideas of Republicanism will be supported with united and unfaltering zeal, and we shall find that principles are of importance than individual preferment, politicians are not necessarily conspirators, and that there may be such a thing as political morality.

WAR NOTES.

London advices from Strasbourg are to the effect that the heroic defence is drawing to a close and the surrender of the city is imminent, necessitated by the failure of ammunition and provisions. — In an address to the Agricultural Association at Aylesbury, on Tuesday evening, Disraeli, in an allusion to national affairs, congratulated England for its, by Parliamentary and other reforms, avoided opportunities of internal dispute, that she was now in a condition to witness unvalued, vanishing Empires and rising Republics. — A Tribune special writing from London on Tuesday, says: "One of the Secretaries of the British Embassy has started for the Prussian headquarters, to ask whether conditions are possible. The Government is of opinion that the Rhine fortresses shall be disarmed." — The Tribune's correspondent at Berlin, on the 6th inst., describes a conversation with Bismarck, who began by expressing his high regard for Gen. Sheridan and made to the United States for their sympathy with the Germans. To a remark concerning the prospect of German unity, Bismarck replied that there was no stronger desire to unity than himself, but care was required in accomplishing the work. "South Germany having fought by our side, her interest must be considered; her inclinations must be now complied. We must obtain the consent of those States. In Bavaria it is impossible to agree on any form of union; among those who favor union the Bavarians look better. News of the French defeat had just been received, on which Bismarck said: "We shall not interfere with the domestic affairs." To the suggestion that there must be some settled Government to guarantee for the payment of the expenses and indemnity, Bismarck replied only by repeating, "We don't want to interfere with the domestic affairs of France. The people think we must have those German Provinces which France took from us many years ago. We must at least render France powerless to menace us by the same means from Metz and Strasburg. We must have and we ask no more than is necessary for our own safety. We are a very patient people. They have been telling us if we did not fight, they would compel us. We are the father of a family, who after enduring many insults, at last concluded to fight for it, but only on condition that the struggle shall be decisive and that he be at rest." — A London special writer says: "I have assured on authority I cannot doubt that Thiers cannot accept absolutely without instructions, any proposals, merely to feel the pulse of the English Government and try to persuade them to join the neutral league to prevent the dismemberment of France, preserve the European equilibrium &c. It needless to say that the result of 7 years ago can lead to nothing. The attitude of the English Government remains perfectly as before stated. It is willing to mediate, take measures for the instance of both parties, not of one.

A MILITARY REUNION. E. Burnside; Vice-President, Gen. J. G. Parke; Secretaries, General Lewis Richmond and Col. D. R. Larned. Among the responses to the toast were the following: "President of the United States," by General Edward Richmond; "Chief of Staff, Army and Navy," by Gen. G. G. Meade; "N. H. Burnside Expedition and Ninth Army Corps," General J. F. Hartranft of Pa.; "Our Fellow Comrades," by Gen. Geo. B. Tyler of N. H.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

The Siege of Paris!

The Work of Destruction Begun Around the City!

KING WILLIAM TO RECOGNIZE THE DEFUNCT REGENCY.

Skirmishes Near the Capital.

Trochu Confident in the Strength of his Defences.

THE SIEGE OF PARIS.

Paris, 14—At noon to-day the work of destruction begun on a grand scale around the city. Vast columns of smoke are reported by latest dispatches as rising at that time to the north and east of the capitol.

Many houses in St Denis were on fire.—The timber at St Cloud was blown up yesterday evening. The fine bridge at Neuilly, one of the handsomest in Europe, is mined ready to be blown up.

The National Guard went on duty to-day in the fortress.

THE BESIEGING POLICY.

The advance guard of the Prussian army before the city consists of eight regiments of infantry, five of cavalry, and battalions of jägers, and 10 batteries of artillery in all about 40,000 men. The remainder of the army is moving slowly, the heads of the columns having reached Coulommiers, in the Department of the Seine and Marne on Tuesday in force.

There was a rumor yesterday of an engagement between the German light cavalry and skirmishers at Morfe Station, 20 miles from Fontainebleau, in which the Bavarians were badly beaten and driven back.

The Prussians as yet have no siege guns for the attack on Paris.

CLOSING AROUND PARIS.

Paris, Sept. 14. The Prussian dragoons have appeared at Nogent Sur Marne, Collins, Sceaux, Valgis, Nanteuil, Plessy and Lindun, small towns to the east, northeast and south of Paris.

The National Guard is to be reorganized throughout France.

Gen. Trochu in an order of to-day, says that seventy thousand men on the ramparts may by persevering efforts save Paris. The city is unapproachable if its defenders are properly armed.

The Councillors of State have temporarily suspended their authority.

All the foreign representatives are still in Paris.

The Prussians are still swarming around Nancy.

The Gaulois has reason to predict a happy result from the peace negotiations now in progress.

NAPOLEON'S CONFINEMENT.

London, Sept. 15. A dispatch from Cassel, dated the 12th inst, says that the Emperor spends his mornings walk some of his officers walking over the lawn or making long conversations. His tether extends several miles in all directions. His guard consists of one officer, two subalterns, one trumpeter and thirty-two men.

EUGENIE AND SON.

The Empress Eugenie and the Prince imperial make constant excursions around Hastings, but carriages or horses are never employed.

The Paris fashion journals [illegible] publication. Mourning is generally worn in Paris and Berlin.

REPUBLICANISM IN ITALY.

The Pope has received a letter from Victor Emanuel in which the latter explains the course he has taken. Any delay on his part, he says, would have occasioned a proclamation of a republic in every Italian city and his army would not have fought a republic, which would have been fatal to papacy—As it is, republicanism is so rampant that they have irrepressible.

Berlin, Sept. 15.

THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT

at Paris would have been accepted by the Prussian Government if the exactions proposed by Prussia had been assented to. These embraced the cession of Alsace and Lorraine and the dismantling of the French fortifications on the German frontier. The Provisional Government refused to listen to any proposition for the surrender of French Territory.

PRUSSIA TO RECOGNIZE THE REGENCY.

London, Sept. 15. The Daily News this morning contains a letter from Berlin, giving the views of the Prussian Government. The writer says that Prussia will not negotiate with the present Government at Paris. Prussia proposes first to occupy Paris. A Regency Corps Legislatif and Senate will then be summoned and will be expected to name Commissioners to treat on the Prussian basis, and when this treaty is signed, Napoleon will be released and France will be left free to choose her own Government.

The blockade of the Elbe has been raised and vessels are now passing freely. Steamers from England to France and Germany will resume service immediately.

OLOZAGA RECALLED.

Madrid, Sept. 15. M. Olozaga, Spanish Minister to Paris has been recalled his offence being the recognition of the French Republic, when by present treaties, Spain is bound to await the action of other powers before taking such a step.

SKIRMISHING NEAR PARIS.

London, Sept. 15. The communication between Paris and Lyons has been destroyed, the Prussians having cut the wires and railroad at Montereau, sixteen miles southeast of Melun. A sharp skirmish occurred there between the German Uhlans and the French Tirailleurs. The former are said to have been beaten off. Firing was heard at Paris yesterday from the direction of Melun. The railway service between Paris and Lyons has been stopped. All the bridges which can be reached will be destroyed to-night.

London, Sept. 15.

ITALIAN UNITY

seems to be nearly accomplished. The sympathy of the people is almost entirely with Italy. A dispatch has been received from Florence, dated yesterday, announcing that the Papal garrison of Montalto had been captured. Lieut.-General Hugelotte should now be before, if not in Rome. Corita Vecchia has declared for the Italian unity. On the approach of the Italian troops at Bricciano, seven miles north of Rome, the inhabitants came out and displayed the Italian colors.

SPAIN

Madrid, Sept. 16. The government is evidently alarmed by the manifestations of the republican spirit of the country, and is silently preparing to meet and checkmate any designs of the republican leaders here. General Prim has been accumulating troops around the city, and has also secured great stores of munitions for their supply. Gen. Prim is evidently uneasy and is using every exertion to hasten the election of a monarch.

Paris, Sept. 15.

FRENCH TROOPS

which recently crossed the Rhine into Baden territory will probably remain and operate on German soil. Reinforcements have gone to them.

Gen. Trochu, in his order of the day to the Garde Nationale, says the result of the review was very gratifying, and that he felt assured that the defence of the city will be admirably sustained. Paris is ready to sacrifice all in order to give France time to organize for an irresistible defence.

Last night the Parisians were awakened by a cannonade all along the ramparts. It was supposed that an attack had been made and there was some excitement, which, however, was allayed when an announcement was made that the gunners were only practicing.

The shops of the city are mostly closed and masters and employes alike are drilling.

The workmen and National Garde have made another demonstration of regard to Minister Washburne and the United States Government.

Lord Lyons warns the British of Paris to leave the city now while they may.

The Place de la Concorde is filled with soldiers of the National Guard.

A Prussian was discovered, to-day, in a secluded place, firing with a rifle at one of the balloons which was used as an outlook by the military authorities. He was promptly arrested.

Garibaldi, Flourens, Bonvielle, and Chateau-blanc are in command of battalions at Paris.

Friendly demonstrations have been made by the Garde Mobile and the people in front of the American Consulate.

The Prussians to-day were camped at Croix Aux Bois, Gaston, Glas and Fontaine-mont, the city and at Nogent Sur Marne.

The Ulians appeared, but retreated when it became evident that the people meant to give them battle.

It is reported that many of the large siege guns of the Prussians are deeply imbedded in the mud of the canal de la Maine in Rhein. The Prussians attempted to transport their guns by this canal and the French suddenly let the water out of it. It is said this will delay the siege for considerable time.

Fort Lyons has been completed and many troops are reaching there daily. The guns are all in position.

Advices from all parts of France say that large sums of money are being subscribed for the national defence and large forces are being equipped in all the departments.

A party of American volunteers passed through Tours to-day coming to Paris.

The conscripts of the regular army are drilling here daily.

Madrid, 15. Rivero is quite ill, and his resignation is expected, Rodriquez will probably be appointed to succeed him.

Constantinople, 15. The Sublime Porte has withdrawn his objections to the Khedives latest loan.

Special to N. Y. Herald.

Boulilon, 15.—10:15 p. m. [illegible] of Marshal Bazaine's army has cut its way through the Prussians at Metz, and are now marching on Paris.

Paris, 15. Tomorrow the Capitol will be completely isolated, all the railways have been cut except the lines running west from the forest Montmorency. The forest of Bondy is now burning, the other forests will be destroyed to-morrow. The gas connections will not be cut off for a few days. Gen. Trochu published a proclamation to the troops today. Neutility is full of supplies, water and food. The gates of Paris will be closed to-morrow.

There are now over six millions of pounds of gun-powder in Paris. No French fortress has yet been taken. Paris is grateful for American sympathy, all classes are resolved to fight to the death. Accurate calculations place the number of the advancing Prussians 400,000. M. Thiers has received further instructions to treat for peace, and hopes are entertained for a successful result. The council of Spanish Ministers have decided to recall Olozaga from Paris for having exceeded his instructions.

Special to N. Y. Herald.

Boulilon Sept. 15—4 p. m. Sedan has been placed in a state of siege; the Mayor has been arrested, and the population expelled. The Prussians apprehend the approach of Bazaine who is reported to have escaped from Metz, and even said to have reached Carignan.

Mancelsheim, near Strasbourg, Sept. 15. The besiegers completed the third parallel before Strasbourg on Tuesday and for past 48 hours the breaching battery has maintained a constant fire, with telling effect.

INTERNATIONAL BOAT RACE.

MONTREAL SEPT. 15.

The International Boat Race took place this afternoon. The weather was fine with a light breeze. The two crews started at 5:30. The Tyne crew were naked to the waist, and the St. John's in fancy shirts. Both dipped their oars simultaneously, but after a few sweeping strokes the Tyne crew took the lead. At 100 yards the Tyne seemed to increase their lead, rowing well within themselves with magnificent stroke. At a quarter of a mile the St. John much drew upon them a little, but the Tyne crew put on a tremendous spurt, the boat jumping out of water at every stroke and at half a mile was a length ahead. On turning the buoy the Tyne crew were three lengths ahead and on the home stretch rowing at an unparalleled pace and with perfect precision, they won the race by six clear lengths. Time, 21 min. 10 sec. The winners were received with the wildest enthusiasm.—The people seemed to have gone mad with excitement. The Tyne men rowed in the Dustan on the Tyne. A splendid boat 40 feet six inches long, 17½ inches wide, and weighing 90 pounds. The St. John crew rowed in the shell "James A. Harding," 40 feet long, 18½ inches wide and weighing 110 pounds. The Tyne stroke averaged 38 per minute and the St. John 42.

The vessel is but little damaged, and has been given into the hands of her own crew.

COMPENSATION.

After the night, the morning's dawn,
Paling and blushing with pearl and rose;
The greatest, saddest days are born
From darkest nights of winter snows.
After the storm the rainbow gleams,
Filling with beauty a heavenly dome;
Through lowering clouds the sunlight streams;
After the voyage to rest at home.

II

There is no sorrow, no pain of life,
But some from its sore smite something sweet;
Past the long hours of carry strife,
Comes Victory with her snowy feet.
Through death to life; each pain and loss,
Each grief we bear, is a heavenly prize;
For Christ was our test in Paradise.

III

Then, count not lost the hopes that fail
Like leaves in autumn one by one;
Nor deem the light is vanished all,
As the dark, dreary night wears on!
You shall know at last, at last we gain,
That through your weary, toiling way,
Are you saw the stars in your life-day wane,
That night was leading to heavenly day.

FANCIFUL ORIGIN OF FECHTER.—The following account of Fechter's rencontre with Mme. Sand in 1851, when he was playing Claudie at the Porte Saint-Martin Theatre, illustrates one phase of his character—independence:

When the drama was first read, Boccage, to whom belonged the leading role, that of an old man, went to Fechter, saying: "We can offer you nothing in Claudie, as I have the first part, and no other is good enough for you."

"On the contrary," replied Fletcher, "I have taken a fancy to the plow boy."

"What? the third part in the piece?"

"Never mind; we'll see what can be made of it."

So Claudie was mounted and Madame Sand came from Nohant "to assist" at the dress rehearsal. At the end of the first act Fechter overheard an excited dialogue between Madame Sand and Boccage in the dressing-room adjoining his own.

"It will kill Claudie," said Madame Sand. "I will not permit, such an outrage. If you allow that man to act I'll withdraw the play."

"But, my dear Madame," retorted Boccage, "You dont know what you're talking about. That man, as you call him, is doing you a great honor. He has taken an inferior part out of compliment to you, and will act it as no one else can. My advice is, you is to keep quiet."

But Madame Sand turned a deaf ear to this advice, and with threats upon her lips, left Boccage to his own reflections.

"What's the matter, Boccage?" asked Fechter, after the lady had retired.

"Why, that foolish woman . . . you shan't play in Claudie. She's mad . . . low-boy, and is very much disgusted with . . . because you dress him in peasant's clothes . . . give him a patois."

"Very well," answered . . . "then I refuse the part. I won't go . . . the rehearsal."

"But we are lost if you . . . my sake pay no attention to her, . . . with your part."

Gradually soothed . . . complaisance, Fletcher put on his street . . . spoke the purest of French, and at . . . of the next act Madame Sand exclaimed, "What a charming young man! Why . . . not look and act this way before?"

Fechter had made a . . . man of her plow-boy.

"Now," said Fechter at . . . conclusion of the rehearsal "If I can't do it as I feel it ought to be done, I won't . . . appear at all. Madame Sand can write, but she has proved that she doesn't know the . . . of acting. She has insulted me, and I . . . with her."

Of course much expostulation ensued, and it was finally decided that Madame Sand to the contrary, Fechter should . . . his own way, by which behavior . . . success of the play. "Take me to him," continued Madame Sand, when the curtain fell on the first night of "Claudie," "take me to him, that I may know him."

"I refuse to know Madame Sand," was Fletcher's answer to this . . . "You need not bring her! I do not . . . an insult."

Madame Sand did not of course . . . introduction, and when she wrote . . . "Claudie" especially for the man who she declared would kill "Claudie," the proud actor refused to accept his part.

Returning one night from the theatre, he was assaulted by a thief, who, attracted by a very large stage jewel, and a diamond paste pin, which he supposed to be real, thought it easy work to rob so slight a youth. Fechter's hot blood and practiced muscle soon punished the robber, who upon finding himself at a disadvantage, drew a knife. What was to be done? Fechter spoke not a word of Italian; the robber not one word of French. There was a language common to both, however—that of pantomime—and they acted out the following dialogue:

"O strike, if you like," gesticulated Fechter; "I am entirely unarmed, and you can have it all your own way, but as you want nothing of me but my diamond pin, it is hardly worth while killing me, when you can have it on easier terms."

"How so?" asked the robber.

"Why, I'll make an exchange. Give me that cameo in your shirt-bosom, and I'll give you my diamond."

"I rather like you, I'll a bargain."

Whereupon the exchange took place. Actor and robber shook hands and separated, the former in possession of a very beautiful cameo, the latter sole proprietor of paste buck. What that robber did to himself upon discovering how completely the tables had been turned, remains a mystery, certainly Fechter never acted better than upon this occasion.—Atlantic Monthly.

A CAVALRY WOMAN—Mrs. F. L. Siegel, a woman whose career as a soldier in the western army has attracted considerable attention, is now in our city endeavoring to raise means to take herself and husband, who is blind, to Minnesota, where they have friends. Inhumable circumstances. She last evening visited Phil. Kearney Post, G. A. R., and a considerable amount was raised for her assistance. She states—and her story is corroborated by documentary and by other evidence—that herself and husband enlisted fraternally in the war in a Missouri cavalry regiment, and that she participated in the battles of Stone River and Shiloh, in addition to sixteen smaller battles and skirmishes. In the battle of Stone River her husband was instantly killed at her side, being struck in the breast by a shell. After two years of active service, she was detailed to hospital duty, and afterward acted as a spy. Being captured by the rebels she was sentenced to be hung, but managed to make her escape. She subsequently married a Minnesota soldier, whose eye-sight was destroyed by an accidental explosion, and who she is now desirous of getting back to his friends in the west. She was a member of the G. A. R. under her old rank, but has not taken her degree under the new code. Mrs. Siegel would easily pass for a male when dressed in that attire as she has a masculine appearance, and in her actions gives no indications of her effeminacy.—[N. O. Times.

WOMAN.

Females, owing to peculiar and important relations which they sustain, their peculiar organization, and the offices they perform, are subject to many sufferings. Freedom from these contributes in no small degree to their happiness and welfare, for none can be happy who are ill. Not only so, but no one of these various female complaints can long be suffered to run on without involving the general health of the individual, and producing permanent sickness and premature decline. Nor is it pleasant to consult a physician for the relief of these delicate affections, and only upon the most urgent necessity will a true woman so far sacrifice her greatest charm as to do this. The sex will thus thank us for placing in their hands simple specifics which will be found efficacious in relieving and curing almost every one of those troublesome complaints peculiar to the sex.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu.

Hundreds suffer on in silence, and hundreds or others apply vainly to struggling and doctors, who either merely tantalize them with the hope of a cure or apply remedies which make them worse. I would not wish to assert anything that would be injurious to the afflicted, but I am bound to say that although it may be produced from excessive exhaustion of the powers of life, by laborious employment, unwholesome air and food, profuse menstruation, the use of tea and coffee, and frequent child-birth, it is far oftener caused by local irritation applied to the mucous membrane of the vagina itself.

When reviewing the cause of these distressing complaints, it is truly painful to contemplate the attendant evils consequent upon them. It is but simple justice to the subject to enumerate a few of the many additional causes which so largely affect the life, health and happiness of woman in all classes of society, and which, consequently, affect more or less directly, the welfare of the entire human family. The stamina that exists for procreation of children and marriage, causes the vast that nature designed for corporeal development to be wasted and perverted in the restraints of dress, the confinement of school and especially in the unhealthy environment of the ball-room. Thus, with the body half-clothed, and the mind unduly excited by pleasure, perverting to midnight force the hours designed by nature for sleep and rest, the work of destruction is half accomplished.

In consequence of this early strain upon her system, unnecessary effort is required by the delicate votary to retain her station in school at a later day thus aggravating the evil. When one excitement is over, another in prospect keeps the mind morbidly sensitive to impression, while the now constant work of each bottle
